UFO FLEET REFUELS AT POWER PLANT IN EGYPT

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Special to The News

A fleet of space shuttle craft and their spectacular "mother ship" have singled out a remote power station in Egypt as a refueling base, and their frequent stops are witnessed by hundreds of villagers who consider the alien visitors as strange but welcome friends!

Even power station employees — knowing it would cost them their jobs — pretend not to notice when the saucer-shaped UFOs and their monstrous, 800-foot-long mother ship hover over the plant to draw electrical current from its transmission lines.

Every man, woman and child living in the Nile River village of Sahafa has walked among the android-like beings that often beam down from the starship to explore the village and surrounding countryside.

"Often they pick up rocks along the river bank, but we have come to know they mean us no harm," plant supervisor Aly Hamdy Chammas explained. "When the great ship draws off power, it is very careful to stay well within the capacity of the generators.

"And the UFOs always refuel in the early morning hours before dawn when power demand is at its minimum.

"We do not begrudge the aliens the power they obviously require."

Villager Sami Hamid said the UFOs have been using the plant as a refueling site since 1987 and have never caused any problems that could threaten the safety of the village or the people.

"All of us here in the village have seen them," he said. "Just eight days ago, as I was walking near the river, the big ship came across the desert like a bolt of lightning. It stopped over the station and just hovered there.

"It projected a greenish-blue ray into the station and at once I heard the generators strain as they worked harder to handle the extra power drain.

"The giant ship was really sucking up the current and the color of the ray changed from greenish-blue to a deep red. After a few minutes it shot back to the heavens and vanished.

"Why it requires our Earth power, I do not know. I should think that such a ship must be able to create its own power. I do not understand.

"But if they want power, it is theirs for the taking whenever they have need of it. We look upon them as our friends. Maybe someday the village will need their help and they will

TEEN DROPS DEAD HAVING SEX WITH OLDER WOMAN!

A shy teenage boy dropped dead while having sex with an older woman in the back seat of her car.

Married mom Jeanne Piccirillo, 24, said she panicked when she couldn't revive sex mate Shannon Richardson, 18, and dumped his body in the street near his home in Methuen, Mass.

"This is tearing me apart," said Mrs. Piccirillo, who didn't tell anyone what happened for two weeks.

"All I do all day is cry. I just want to know how he died."

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

It's possible Shannon died of a heart attack though he had no previous heart problems, according to family members. There were no signs of foul play on the body.

"The cause of death is still unknown," a cop said. "Toxicology tests of his blood and urine showed no signs of cocaine, LSD, alcohol, barbituates or other drugs in his system," the officer said.

On the last night of his young life, quiet Shannon was at home with his family until Mrs. Piccirillo stopped by about midnight to see if he wanted to accompany her to a convenience store. They drove to a secluded spot and were having sex when Shannon said, "I have a head rush," and stopped breathing in her arms, police quoted her as saying.

"ALL I do all day is cry. I just want to know how he died," says Massachusetts housewife Jeanne Piccirillo, left, who was having an affair with Shannon.

Mrs. Piccirillo began her affair with Shannon last June, a year after she got married to her husband, David, and three months after the birth of their son, she told police.

"He was not like any other 18-year-old out there. He was really caring," she said.

The pretty married mother said teenager Shannon was a "good friend" she turned to while having marital problems.

The two would talk on the phone nearly every night after Shannon came from from his job at a dry cleaners.

Shannon's family knew about the affair and tried to get him to end it.

"He had come to me before and asked my advice," said Shannon's mom, Cindy.

"I said, 'Stay away, she's married. It's a bad situation.'"

"My son was very quiet and shy," said Cindy. "She initiated the relationship."

Shannon's family is upset and angry that Mrs. Piccirillo dumped his body in the street and drove away without telling them.

"She couldn't even call the hospital or take him there and leave him?" said an aunt, Helen Julien.

"She couldn't come in and tell his mother that something was wrong?" asked Mrs. Julien.

A police spokesman told The Weekly World News the investigation is continuing into the cause of Shannon's death.

TRAGIC teenager Shannon Richardson was "very quiet and shy," says his mom Cindy. "Mrs. Piccirillo initiated the relationship."

LOCH NESS MONSTER

DIVER swims near Nessie after its capture in the huge lake in Scotland.

Nessie caught in huge steel net — baited with 3,000 pounds of tuna!

By ZACK HAGAR
Special correspondent

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Scientists from seven countries captured the Loch Ness monster in a steel net baited with tuna fish on December 22 and have now provided the world with the first clear photographs of a creature that has intrigued mankind since it was first sighted 1300 years ago — in 690 A.D.!

It is not yet known what the researchers plan to do with the 70-foot, 20-ton beast. But it is believed that they will release it after they finish taking blood and tissue samples, possibly by the end of the January.

"This is it. This is the proof we've been waiting for," Dr. Michel Genet, the French zoologist who headed the team of experts who captured the monster, told reporters here.

"For the first time since the creature was sighted in the distant past we know for a fact that it does exist. The task before us now is to determine exactly what it is.

"It's much too early to attempt to name or classify the monster," he added. "But my gut feeling tells me that we've caught what may be the last dinosaur on Earth."

The capture of the Loch Ness monster, which the world knows as Nessie, capped a 3-year, $9 million research project that was organized by Dr. Genet and supported by scientists in France, Italy, Belgium, Germany, Sweden, Norway and the United States.

In spite of the potential rewards, the decision to search for the creature didn't come easy — because the vast majority of scientists in Europe and the United States considered the Loch Ness monster to be a myth.

"From the very beginning we understood that our professional reputations were on the line," said Dr. Genet. "Many of our colleagues treated us as a laughingstock and one science journal actually suggested that we forget about the Loch Ness monster and search for Santa Claus instead."

Undaunted, the research team set up a base of operations in January 1989 and spent the next 32 months mapping the floor of the legendary Scottish lake with underwater cameras and sonar.

Once they had familiarized themselves with the monster's turf, they baited a 175-foot metal net with 3,000 pounds of raw tuna fish and lowered it into the loch.

Dog calls it quits after 11 years as mayor of California town

By JACK ALEXANDER/Staff writer

During his 11 years as mayor of Sunol, Calif., Bosco was entertained at the Japanese embassy, appeared on national TV shows and never lost an election. It wasn't a bad life — for a dog.

The easygoing, 75-pound part Labrador, part Rottweiler has been forced to step down as the head of the tiny hamlet of 500 because his owner, Tom Stillman, moved to nearby Livermore.

"This town is still in a state of shock," said Virginia McCullough.

"Bosco was the spirit of this community. He was not like most politicians. He never lied, didn't cheat and never took a bribe.

"He got free beef jerky from guys at the corner saloon from time to time, but he never promised them anything in return, so we don't consider that a bribe," she was quick to add.

Bosco was first elected mayor in 1980, defeating two humans. He was unchallenged four years later and won his third four-year term three years ago against two other dogs.

"That strong-minded mutt had the respect of this entire town," said Tom's mother, Pat Stillman. "He represented the fierce independence and pride of this town. With him as our leader, we were successful in fighting off developers for years."

A group of Japanese officials visited Sunol several years ago and were shocked when they shook the mayor's paw. They later invited Bosco to the Japanese embassy in San Francisco.

"They wanted to know why we had a dog for a mayor, so I asked them if they knew who was mayor of Chicago, Detroit and Miami. When they said 'No,' I pointed out thousands of people know who Bosco is."

He has been written up in national publications — including The Weekly World News — and he's been on national TV.

RETIRED — Hizzoner Bosco.

The NEWS reported Bosco's disappearance in 1988.

It turned out he had dozed off in the back of a pickup truck and ended up in Oregon.

He was given a ride home a week later.

Bosco is gone, but not forgotten. He has definitely left his mark on this wide spot in the road — 45 miles east of San Francisco. Seems he's got a Rottweiler named Sweetpea in a family way.

the researchers to raise and lower it at will. For weeks the bait remained untouched. But on November 24 they had a massive strike that ripped the metal net like it was rotten cloth.

Dr. Genet said: "It took several weeks to get a back-up net to the site and another three days to bait it and put it in place.

"Less than 24 hours later, on December 22, the monster swam into the net again. And this time it held."

The monster struggled furiously at first but is now resting comfortably on the bottom of is amphibious and needs oxygen to exist, the scientists inflate the net's air bags and bring it to the surface three times a day to allow the monster to breathe.

They are feeding it approximately 2,000 pounds of raw tuna a day, which is about half of what it would consume if it were swimming free, Dr. Genet said.

"The most intriguing thing about the monster is its demeanor, which by all accounts is good," continued the expert. "Our divers have actually gotten quite friendly with it. They stroke its head and let it eat tu-

The scientific team discussed the possibility of moving the monster from the loch to a laboratory but decided that it was too risky.

They also thought about building an enormous underwater cage to keep it in but have been unable to secure the estimated $5 million it would take to finance the job.

"We are currently taking tissue and blood samples and observing the creature's behavior 24 hours a day," said Dr. Genet. "We hope to finish up by the end of January. We won't really decide what to do with the monster until then."

Sex-change man's breast implants smashed during fairy free-for-all!

By JOE BERGER / Staff writer

Dazzling drag queen Percy Segers was sipping cocktails in his glitziest low-cut gown when a barroom brawl broke out and some bruiser in a pink dinner dress beat poor Percy to a pulp — smashing his silicone breast implants to smithereens!

Now the ticked-off transvestite has filed a whopping $1.2 million lawsuit against fellow fairy Luis Bauza and the bar where over two dozen guys dolled up like gals battled it out in a hair-pulling, face-scratching free-for-all last November.

'My beautiful figure is RUINED,' says ticked-off transvestite

"I'm ruined, absolutely ruined," peeved Percy fumed to reporters in Alicante, Spain. "I had one of the best figures you've ever seen until that bitch attacked me for no good reason and bashed my bust in.

"Now I've got to go through all kinds of corrective surgery and I'm not sure if I'll ever have the same shape again."

Prissy Percy, 26, had does enlarge his breasts to lady-like proportions last year and planned to undergo a full sex change once he'd saved the money.

"But everything's gone to hell now because I have to use my savings to get my boobs back," sobbed the British-born belle-to-be. "I knew something horrible was going to happen in that dive someday."

Cops said powder-puff Percy was hanging out in a saloon frequented by transvestites when a minor quarrel between two queens ignited a knock-down, drag-out brawl. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," laughed investigator Enrique Rana. "They had a real catfight in there — kicking and screaming and scratching each other's eyes out — and apparently Mr. Segers got caught up in it. One of the boys started pounding him in the chest and broke the hell out of it." Limp-wristed Luis and four other transvestites were convicted of assault and fined $100 apiece.

But Percy says that isn't enough. "I want that hussy to pay for what she did to me," said the heartsick sissy.

"He took away a girl's most prized possession — her womanly figure."

HEART ATTACK SHOCKER!

Tragic Neil Janson had a heart attack and died just seconds after he renewed wedding vows with wife Muriel on their 25th wedding anniversary!

"It was a terrible thing to happen at such a happy time," said Albert Awbrey, who was a guest at the couple's original wedding in 1966. "Neil's widow is devastated," continued the man from Hayes, England. "They were such a devoted couple, very close."

NEWLYWED DIES CHASING THIEF!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Newlywed Ben Nowak went all out to chase down, capture and turn over to police the teenage thief who had twice that day burglarized his home — then he dropped dead of a heart attack!

And the 14-year-old girl he had to pursue now faces a manslaughter charge in addition to charges of breaking, entering and theft.

'I can't believe he's gone,' sobs heartbroken bride

Nowak, a 28-year-old Polish immigrant to Canada, was giving a statement to police when he suddenly keeled over in his home in Hamilton, Ontario. He was rushed to a hospital where he was pronounced dead.

"I can't believe he's gone," sobbed 24-year-old Elizabeth Nowak.

"We were married only two months and eight days. He was a nice, gentle man. He was very caring and wanted everything for me. Everything he did was for me."

The young widow said she and her husband had put their home up for sale because it had been the target of previous burglaries and they wanted to get away from that neighborhood.

She said on the day he died, her husband, a machine operator, was in their second floor bedroom when he heard a noise downstairs.

He went down to find a young girl trying to take a video recorder from the living room.

"He yelled at the girl and she ran from the house," Hamilton Police Sgt. Bob Buck said. "He chased her through several back yards for a distance of about half a block and had to climb over several fences before he finally apprehended her.

"There was a struggle that was seen by neighbors and they called the police.

"When the officers arrived, she was in his custody and under control.

"While he was giving his statement, he toppled over and fell into the arms of an officer.

"He was rushed to a hospital and was pronounced dead on arrival."

Police later learned that the girl and her boyfriend had stolen several items from the home earlier that day and that the girl, a juvenile, later returned to get the video recorder.

Relatives said Nowak wasn't on medication and didn't have any known heart problems before he died.

"WE were married only two months," says Ben Nowak's wife Elizabeth.

Coma boy wakes when parents say his dog's name

An 11-year-old youngster snapped out of a week-long coma when his parents mentioned that his dog, Rusty, missed him.

Sixth-grader Donny Tomei suffered a severe head injury when he was struck by a car in West Haven, Conn., and lapsed into a deep coma.

A day after the boy's family mentioned the pet dog, Donny snapped his fingers and moved his arms and legs. The next day he opened his eyes for the first time.

"Now he moves his legs and arms every time we say, 'Donny, you have to get better so you can walk Rusty down to the boat ramp,'" said Donny's brother, Albert. "He loves that dog more than anything."

Sicko killer masterminds gruesome plot from his prison cell

NEW MANSON FAMILY IS OUT FOR BLOOD

By KEN BASSETT
Correspondent

Charles Manson, the vicious, bloodthirsty mastermind behind the gruesome murders of actress Sharon Tate and others more than a decade ago, is poised to strike again.

He's smuggling commands from prison to his new "family" lurking in the California desert.

"I have a new set of friends, a new family," the crazed mass-murderer, now serving a life sentence, told a former "family" member who's still in close touch with him.

An exclusive investigation by The Weekly World News, including personal interviews with former family members, revealed these spine-chilling facts:

- About 50 new Manson followers have an insane plan to get Manson released — by conducting a reign of terror against celebrities in southern California.
- Manson is in contact with his followers, and directing their actions.
- And Manson's followers were behind an attempt to break him out of his Vacaville, Calif., prison.

The new Manson cult members, led by two men who call themselves "Cobra" and "Dionysus," are so bloodthirsty they even have members of Manson's old family cowering in fear.

"We don't want anything to do with those animals, man," said the former family member still in touch with Manson.

"I'll tell you this — beware of Cobra and Dionysus. Don't tread on them, or they'll come after you and we'll be picking up your pieces all over the country!

"They were never members of the original family. This is a whole new group, about 50 members and growing. They formed long after Charlie's arrest and trial."

Another former Manson family member also added, "They've become drunk on the Manson nightmare.

"One told me, 'When we get started, the "Tate" murders will look like child's play.'" And this from a former member of the new, even more bloodthirsty Manson family. "Someone's got to stop them before the murders happen," the source pleaded.

"They're crazy, insane — a pack of psychopaths.

"They intend to induce fear by random murders of famous people, then start a massive blackmail and extortion campaign to free Manson."

The former member still in touch with Manson revealed, "They all exist to fulfill Charlie's dream of holocaustic murders and carnage — the most brutal horror one could imagine.

"They really scare me. They make Charlie's old butchers look like choir boys!"

And Manson, who has little hope of ever being released from prison, plans to be with his new followers in the near future.

"I'll be seeing you on the outside soon!" he told the former family member. "My family needs their leader."

STILL in charge: Manson has been smuggling commands to his family from prison, below.

Choir member splashed with acid — for singing off-key!

Feud ends with one singer in jail and the other in the hospital!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Two feuding church choir members blamed each other for singing off key until one settled the argument by tossing acid in the other's face, cops said.

"You'd think she could have found another way to get her message across without trying to disfigure a fellow choir member, especially while they were in a church rehearsing for the Sunday morning worship," Det. Mike Collins said.

Demetrius Moore, 27, was hospitalized in stable condition in Lexington, Ky., with serious burns on her face, neck and chest.

Four other choir members were splashed in the attack and suffered minor burns.

Bad blood began to boil between the victim and choir member Naomi Parker, 32, during a choir rehearsal at the East Second Street Christian Church a week earlier, Det. Collins said.

"Each one blamed the other for singing off-key," Det. Collins added. "The feud carried over to the following Sunday morning."

CHARGED with assault on her fellow choir member, Naomi Parker confers with her attorney during her hearing in court.

The attack took place about 11 a.m. as the church service was beginning.

Demetrius arrived late and Naomi was waiting for her, cops said.

The two women were arguing when the choir finished its usual prayer and were marching into the church sanctuary for the opening hymn, according to police.

"That's when Naomi tossed the acid in her face," Det. Collins said. Police said Naomi ran out of the church after the surprise attack and was arrested later as she walked home.

The Rev. Raymond Brown said he was shocked and dismayed by the incident. The church service went on as scheduled as Demetrius and the others were taken to the hospital.

Naomi Parker was charged with first-degree assault and jailed on $7,500 cash bond.

Hubby swipes wife's choppers to keep her home

When his estranged wife Jeanette refused to go out with him on her birthday, spurned hubby Trevor Woods made sure she didn't go out with anyone — he snatched her false teeth right out of her mouth!

Though cops searched for the choppers, they weren't found until after midnight, too late for Jeanette to have her planned night out with the

William Shatner: A UFO saved my life

In a spine-tingling saga straight out of Star Trek, Captain Kirk's life was saved by a friendly UFO when his speeding motorcycle hit a pothole and William Shatner was nearly fried alive on the burning sun-scorched sands of Death Valley!

"One day in the late '60s I was out driving with four other guys, around noon — that's the hottest part of the day in the desert — when I hit a hole and fell over," Shatner told Michael C. Luckman, director of the New York Center for UFO Research.

"I must have fainted when the bike collapsed on top of me. When I came to — I estimate that I was unconscious for only a minute — I couldn't get my motorcycle started. The motor refused to turn over. To this day I don't know she wouldn't move an inch," recalls Shatner, currently starring in Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country.

This is when Shatner almost bought the farm in the Mojave Desert inferno.

"It was like a blazing oven. When the bike fell on top of me, it provided my prostrate form with life-giving shade. As I came to — and this is where the story begins to get crazy — I thought I saw somebody — another cyclist — in the distance waving me on, and so I continued to struggle with the heavy metal monster until I stumbled upon civilization in the form of a gas station in the middle of the desert," says Shatner. "It was then off in the distance I saw an object glistening in the heavens."

But what happened to the pals Shatner was riding with? Surely they must have realized he wasn't riding with them anymore. "This is another eerie part of the episode," said Shatner.

"We had been riding using the old buddy system, everybody looking out for the guy behind. Somewhere along the way, our cycle pack was joined by a fifth person — a stranger — who had obviously been wandering the desert alone. I guess when the rider in front of me turned and looked back over his shoulder and saw our 'friend' he must have figured it was me."

They later looked around and this "stranger" was gone. Finally someone said, "Where's Shatner?"

Well, Shatner was back quite a few miles, burning up from the 110-degree heat and trying unsuccessfully to get his vehicle started.

Was the stranger who joined the pack and later vanished the same guy who saw Shatner off in the distance and waved him to safety? "I can't say for certain he wasn't," says Shatner.

"Ironically, the entire Star Trek phenomenon as we know it may never have existed had it not been for the appearance of that UFO," says Luckman. "Shatner almost certainly would have died in that terrific desert heat.

"To Star Trek fans, a UFO leading William Shatner out of the desert is roughly equivalent to Moses leading the Jewish people out of Egypt and then parting the Red Sea." — Special to The Weekly World News

Axl Rose loves living up to his "psycho" image — even if it means kicking and cursing Guns N' Roses roadies!

At a chaotic concert in Frisco recently, the broken Axl stalked the stage, smashing every mike stand in sight. When the sound technician tried to unbend the twisted metal, Axl gave him a good hard kick for his efforts.

"Hey, check it out," chortled Axl, "I'm having one of those 'irrational temper tantrums' you keep reading about in the press."

Then, as if to underscore his imbalance, Axl hurled an upright stand like a javelin at the helpless roadie, who ducked just in time to avoid serious head injury.

$2,000 REWARD

...for her missing pooch — $0 for missing hubby!

"ALL I WANT is my precious dog Frisky," says housewife Martha Weathers whose hubby ran off with the mutt. Martha rented a sign advertising a reward for the return of her wirehaired terrier.

By E. M. COBB/ Correspondent

Heartbroken housewife Martha Weathers has offered a $2,000 reward for her precious pet dog, Frisky, who has been missing for more than a month — along with her husband, Paul.

"My husband leaving is an answer to my prayers, but why did he have to take Frisky with him? Paul is a domineering jerk, but I love that dog. He is like the child we never had," Martha said.

Martha, 55, has a huge sign outside her home near St. Louis, Mo., which reads: Reward for dog." Martha said she came home from shopping about a month ago and her husband and Frisky were gone.

"No note. No anything," she said. "He took his pickup truck, clothes, the dog's leash and food dish and half the money in our joint bank accounts."

Foreign diplomats owe us million$ in parking fines

. . . & WON'T PAY A DIME!

ARM meter maids with shotguns and let 'em shoot out diplomats' car tires till they pay their fines, says Ed!

I'm madder than a meter maid with a busted pencil over the millions of bucks of parking tickets deadbeat foreign diplomats are running up in our nation's capital — and simply refusing to pay.

When those foreign fat cats tear up their tickets, guess who gets stuck with paying the fines? You got it — hardworking American taxpayers like you and me, that's who.

These funny-talking bigwigs park their Mercedes and Rolls-Royces anywhere they want, anytime they want for as long as they want.

And if they get a parking ticket, they just rip it up and thumb their big, fat noses at us because they have diplomatic immunity, for crying out loud.

Vodka-swilling diplomats from the money-squandering Soviet Union have run up a $3.2 million parking ticket tab — while they're in Washington begging for money, for Pete's sake!

Moneybags officials from Israel like to hog those choice handicapped parking spots that are so conveniently located.

And when they find a ticket

the United States. They've run up over $80,000 in unpaid parking tickets in the past three months alone!

But what makes me so pig-biting mad is that those towelheads from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait just told us to go to hell when we dunned 'em for $121,250 in parking fines.

We should have bombed every one of these camel jockeys when we had the chance — during Operation Desert

there that pays its parking tickets. "There is a certain amount of 'you can't touch me, you can't tow my car so I'm going to park anywhere I please,' " said one hopping-mad State Department official.

And those mealy-mouth, sniveling Commies aren't any better. Hundreds of those lazy weasels from Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Bulgaria are racking up thousands of dollars a day in parking fines — while they're in Washington begging for handouts!

And try this on for size — the Pope is refusing to pay. We ought to have a collection agency on His Holiness until he springs for the bucks.

He can always sell that fancy robe of his if he has to. I'm madder than a skunk in a perfume factory over this whole ugly mess and I just had a don't cough up the dough for these unpaid parking tickets, let's allow meter maids to carry 12-gauge shotguns and blast all their tires to smithereens.

And keep blasting 'em until they pay their gol-durn parking tickets like us God-fearing Americans.

ED'S PARKING TICKET POLL

(CHECK ONE BOX:)

☐ YES! I agree with Ed that we should blast holes in every dame tire on these fat cat foreigners' cars until they pay off their parking tickets!

☐ NO! These foreign bigwigs have a right to get away with not paying parking tickets. We should allow them to park anywhere for free!

Study proves cranberry juice can cure urinary infections

Painful urinary tract infections suffered by millions of Americans can usually be prevented and cleared up simply by drinking cranberry juice, experts say.

Cranberry juice contains an acid that kills the bacteria responsible for infections of the urinary tract, and this healthy, natural remedy has no side effects.

And for treating urinary tract infections, drinking cranberry juice is simple, safe and less expensive than other methods, said Dr. Frederick Stare.

From his own experience, Dr. Stare found it to be a very effective means of treating infections. He even prescribed it for his own wife.

It cleared up the infections for her after just five or six days, he said. Anyone who has a urinary tract infection should drink at least eight ounces of cranberry juice a day, four ounces in the morning and four in the evening, Dr. Stare advised. Four ounces a day should prevent infections.

For severe infections, you should see your doctor, he said.

Men and women can avoid painful urinary tract infections and save money spent on antibiotics by drinking cranberry juice, said Dr. Hans Fisher.

In a clinical study, 60 people suffering urinary tract infections were given 16 ounces of cranberry juice daily.

Three weeks later, 53 percent of the patients were free of symptoms and another 20 percent had improved, according to Dr. Charles A. Brusch, who co-authored the study.

Creep drags pooch behind speeding pickup

'DRAG THIS CREEP BEHIND A TRUCK AT 60 M.P.H.,' SAY NEWS READERS

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Dan Roose, the Indiana man who dragged a pooch named Tramp down the street with his pickup truck, was sentenced to three years in prison, two years probation, 90 days home detention and a $500 fine.

When The Weekly World News, in the July 7, 1990 issue, first told the harrowing story of Tramp's near-fatal ordeal, we threw down a challenge: What kind of punishment could fit so brutal a crime? We asked that You Be The Judge.

Thousands of outraged readers responded, with an overwhelming majority crying out for simple justice . . . an eye for an eye. "Tie the creep to the back of a pickup truck and drag HIM down the street" was the typical reply.

In passing sentence, Indianapolis Judge Richard E. Sallee said sending Roose to jail is warranted because he had "tortured and mutilated" Tramp.

"This was a family dog that suffered, and this man (Roose) could do it to a human."

Judge Sallee, however, said Roose would have to serve only 60 days of his three-year term. The probation, home detention and fine remain in force, though Roose's attorney said he will appeal the sentence.

Roose, 33, didn't take the stand in his defense, but outside the courtroom he reiterated his claim that he hadn't known that Tramp was tethered to the back of his truck.

But several witnesses said Roose — who apparently was not happy with Tramp's choice of toilet sites — ignored their pleas to stop as he drove his truck down the street at about 60 m.p.h.

Tramp, the 6-year-old pooch owned by Roose's neighbors, Sally and Cameron Wright, was practically skinned alive.

He survived after undergoing surgery that required 500 stitches.

CONVICTED: Dan Roose was sentenced to three years in the pokey.

SKINNED alive: Tramp, right after he was brutally dragged down the street tied to a truck — at 60 m.p.h.

Man charges dying brother $50G for bone marrow transplant!

HEARTLESS Franz Specht shows off part of the $50,000 payoff he got for giving his brother a life-saving transplant.

By RICK TRACY
Correspondent

'I don't care whether the S.O.B. lives or dies — but 50 grand is 50 grand'

Money-grubbing Franz Specht is getting rich off his dying brother's misery, selling him life-saving bone marrow — for $50,000.

"Personally, I don't care if the S.O.B. lives or dies, but fifty grand is fifty grand. I've got something he needs and he can afford it. It's as simple as that," Franz told a newspaper in Bremen, Germany.

Franz, 25, and his older brother, Hans, 27, have hated each other since they were teenagers. The fact that Hans faced death from cancer without the bone marrow transplant didn't change anything.

"I wanted $100,000 in U.S. currency but all he had left in his savings was $50,000, so he threw in his new Honda as part of the deal," said Franz.

Hard working Hans, a construction engineer, was stricken with bone cancer four months ago. Doctors gave him less than six months to live unless he got a bone marrow transplant. "We needed bone marrow from his only brother," said Dr. Jurgen Kohler.

"I just laughed when Hans' wife called and told me I was the only one who could save his life," said Franz, a high school dropout.

"I wasn't about to let those surgeons mess with my body until Hans mentioned he had a savings account set up for his son's education," said greedy Franz. "I agreed to save his miserable hide for the money and his 1980 Honda."

Franz said he has despised his brother since high school.

"He was the smart one who made good grades and never got in trouble. He was a good athlete, dated good-looking women and was liked by everyone," Franz said.

"I am the black sheep of the family who quit school, who can't hold a job and who is always getting in trouble."

Deathly ill Hans said he'd almost rather die than ask his brother for help. "I've hated his guts all these years for his lying, his cheating and the grief he has caused our mom and dad," Hans said.

"I don't mind paying the punk for helping me. At least I won't owe him a damn thing if he saves my life."

THERE'S NO LOVE lost between brothers Hans, who is dying of

Automatic door opener saves little girl's life

Seven-year-old Megan Smith faced death under the wheels of a 2-ton delivery truck, but at the last moment she was miraculously saved — when an automatic garage-door opener slammed down and stopped the moving vehicle.

The English schoolgirl was playing in the garage of her family home in Essex. The garage door was open. The truck, parked on a hill facing the Smith home, slipped its brakes and rolled down the hill right toward the garage where the child was playing.

Witnesses say the truck was right on top of Megan when the mechanical door suddenly slammed down.

"The door acted as if it had a mind of its own," said Meg-

"No one triggered it," she said. "It moved all by itself and slammed down with such speed that it caught the truck right between the cab and the body.

"I saw the whole thing, but there was no way I could get to Megan in time to save her.

"If it weren't for the garage door opener my daughter would be dead for sure."

"Everybody who saw it thought Megan was doomed," Mrs. Smith said.

"Then there was this terrible noise, and we realized that the automatic garage door had suddenly slammed down.

"The truck topped on a dime, and the wheels were just inches away from Megan. No one could believe it. It's like the hand of God reached down

Ex-cons reveal: Best & worst places to stash valuables

Here are the best and worst places to hide valuables in your home, according to four ex-convicts who have spent a good part of their lives trying to find them.

The best hiding places to stash treasures are:

1. Inside the cardboard tube in a roll of toilet paper or paper towels. Most burglars won't think of looking there.

2. In the children's bedroom or playrooms, where burglars ordinarily wouldn't expect anything valuable to be hidden.

3. In the kitchen, among cooking utensils or pots and pans.

4. In the bottom of a clothes hamper.

5. In fake wall sockets, which are often advertised in magazines.

6. In the ashes of a fireplace. Put your valuables in a plastic bag before burying them under ashes.

Here are the worst places to hide your valuables.

1. Anywhere in the bedroom.
2. Under a mattress or rug.
3. In a drawer under clothes.
4. In the pockets of clothes hanging in closets.
5. In a den, study or home office. After the bedrooms, these are the second most common places people hide valuables.
6. In locked drawers. The lock will merely arouse a burglar's curiosity and he'll usually pry it open easily.

Dead-body washer wanted

Brazilians think they can make easy money in the U.S. — by washing dead bodies!

"For $100 a body, I would gladly wash even a smashed corpse," one Brazilian said, who along with most of the country believes that they can clean cadavers for $100 to $150 per body because for some unknown reason — Americans hate to do it.

Some joker spread this story about 10 years ago and even today, the rumor lives on.

My laundromat lover made a 'whirl-fool' out of me!

Dear Dotti: I met a super guy at the coin laundry where I wash and dry my clothes and we started a relationship right away. In fact, after a whirlwind three-week romance, he asked me to marry him and I accepted without delay.

Yesterday, however, I found out that I'm not his one and only. Another gal who goes to the same laundry told me that he's been romancing her — and they're engaged, too! I haven't dumped the guy because I still love him, Dotti, but I really do feel like a fool. Any advice, Dotti? — Confused in Tucson

Dear Confused: Don't be stupid. If you have any self-respect at all you'll dump this bum — before he really takes you to the cleaners!

I need a boyfriend but my stepfather says 'no way!'

Dear Dotti: I have a stepfather who doesn't trust me to have a boyfriend. I'm 17 years old and whenever I leave the house he goes through my desk, diary, letters and photo album to see what I'm up to with the opposite sex. This isn't fair, Dotti. What should I do? — Deprived in Rocky Mount

Dear Deprived: Make a list of all the reasons you want a boyfriend and present it to your stepdad. Be sure to tell him why you feel like you're responsible enough to have a steady and let him know that I'm in your corner as long as you make good grades, obey curfews and know enough about sex to keep from getting in trouble. If you do what I say he'll see the error of his ways — I personally guarantee it!

My neighbor's high life is getting me down!

Dear Dotti: My next-door neighbor is giving me fits! He throws big parties four or five nights a week and the people he invites over park cars in my yard and toss beer cans and whisky bottles in my bushes. If I complain my neighbor just laughs and flips me the bird. I'm at my wits' end over this. What should I do? — Had Enough in Frankell

Dear Had Enough: If the cops won't help, get smart — and have a few parties of your own. Giving your neighbor a taste of his own medicine will wise him up.

Can somebody tell me why women act so dumb?

Dear Dotti: Why do women act so dumb? — Richard in Oakdale

Dear Richard: Women have to act dumb. If they didn't, oafs like you wouldn't be able to understand them!

Should I buy a luxury car for my darling daughter?

Dear Dotti: My 16-year-old daughter is a wonderful child and I'd like to reward her. She wants a new car, a little subcompact, but I'm thinking about surprising her with something better — like a full-size Lincoln. Should I give my daughter the little subcompact she's been asking for or knock her socks off with the Lincoln? — Joe in Jupiter

Death Row cons pick steak and junk food for their last meals

Condemned killers prefer steak and potatoes topped by cake and ice cream for their last meal, says Crime Beat magazine.

Junk food also is a big favorite, but some cons skip the main course and go straight to dessert.

Prison chefs try hard to fill the last meal requests of killers before they go to meet their maker.

Before Charles Walker was executed in Illinois last year, he dined on pan-fried wild rabbit and blackberry pie. Texas killer Andy Barefoot tried to burn out his belly before he died with chili, rice, pinto beans, beets and mustard greens.

Bookkeeper sues boss — for hurting his feelings!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Bookkeeper Bob David has gone to court to sue his boss — for hurting his feelings!

The Brisbane, Australia, bachelor says Clifton Andrews, 56, told him he was a spineless wimp who was no good at his job and unmarried because no red-blooded woman wanted him. The unhappy employee says those cruel words made him suffer and worry and he wants Andrews to pay damages.

THIN-SKINNED Bob David couldn't cope with his mean-spirited boss.

"I just shouldn't have to work with someone who insults me and makes me feel bad," says David, 34, who insists he can't quit his job because of the recession. "Mr. Andrews is way out of line.

HE CALLED ME A WIMP!

"The fact is I do very well at my job, considering the atmosphere of non-support I have to work in. And my marital state is simply none of his business."

Andrews, head of a small lumber company, declined to comment on David's lawsuit.

The two have been working together since 1985, when David was hired as an office assistant. But last year when David became bookkeeper, their contacts became more frequent and less cordial, according to court papers.

"Mr. Andrews seemed to resent having a sensitive, caring man working for him," says David. "When I would express concern over his diet or his late hours, he got mad. All I was trying to do was to make him feel important, but I guess the attention bothered him.

"Pretty soon he started snapping at me and making me feel terrible. He kept talking about sissies whenever I was around him. He made jokes about my work and told me I didn't have the spine to ask for a raise. That really hurt."

Stung to the quick, the slight, 5-foot-3-inch bookkeeper decided to stop Mr. Andrews by taking him to court. He is seeking $25,000 for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

"I can hardly work because it hurts so much to be around a disapproving person like Mr. Andrews," David said. "I just want to return to a normal, loving office atmosphere."

Children's blood drained for bizarre rituals!

CRUEL PARENTS TORTURED THEIR KIDS WITH SWORDS

. . . on their birthdays, say cops

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Helpless children were raped, sodomized, beaten, tortured with hot needles under their fingernails and regularly stabbed with swords to draw blood by their sadistic parents, cops say.

"From what the children tell us, their parents subjected them to unbelievable pain during regular rituals over the past 18 months, but we're not sure why," said Police Det. Richard Rok.

"Some of the neighbors even joined in."

Cops also are investigating reports that some of the horror happened on the children's birthdays.

The youngsters' terrifying life of torture finally ended when the couple's 12-year-old daughter fled to a women's shelter in Johnstown, Pa., and told cops about the abuse.

She begged police not to arrest her father for fear no jail could hold him, said one officer.

"She was afraid that even if we did arrest him, he'd be able to just break the bars in the jail cell, that nothing could hold him," Det. Yvonne Krug said.

"They were terrified of him. They believed he had super-human powers."

The father, 34, and mother, 33, who police didn't identify, were jailed on bond ranging from $375,000 to $400,000.

Their five daughters, ages 3, 5, 8, 12, and 13, and two sons, ages 8 and 8 months, are in a foster home. Three men, ages 39, 41, and 29, and three juveniles also were arrested in the horrifying case.

"We understand the rapes and other sexual abuse weren't isolated cases," said one officer.

"The children were used as human guinea pigs by their barbaric parents."

Ceremonial swords were used by the father to draw blood from the children to pour on the grave of a daughter burned to death in a fire three years ago, cops said.

The father told police he believed his 12-year-old daughter had two personalities. He and his wife performed an exorcism on her by putting her in a bed surrounded by Bibles and burning candles, cops said.

"When you think of what agony these children went through behind closed doors, it makes you shudder," said a cop. "Hopefully, their ordeal is over."

CRUEL parents turned their kids' birthday parties into torture sessions, say police.

Dwarf stumps for a little respect

By BEATRICE DEXTER / Correspondent

Pint-sized Pete Andrews is on the warpath over insensitivity to dwarfs — and he says he won't rest until the whole world refers to short folks as "vertically challenged humans."

The 46-inch-high activist is traveling the globe to spread respect for dwarfs, midgets and other puny people. He says he is dedicating his life to see that runts like himself have the stature they deserve.

"It's just not right to use terms like dwarf and midget to describe thinking, feeling human beings," says Andrews, who works in public relations.

"Those are terms that make vertically challenged persons feel bad. It makes them feel that the most important thing about them is what they don't have — height."

This year the sawed-off speaker plans to address audiences in the U.S., Great Britain, New Zealand and his native Australia.

"Actually, short people have a lot to offer," says Andrews. "Famous actors like Michael J. Fox and brilliant world leaders like Napoleon are examples of outstanding vertically challenged persons. But all most people think about when they think about us is circus freaks, court jesters and comics. We resent that image very much. We may be short, but we can reach the same heights as normal people."

Andrews says his movement also aims to rid the world of pygmy pastimes like dwarf-tossing and bowling with midgets. But he admits it's a big challenge to defend the small.

"We're used to people looking down on us," Andrews says. "But we don't have to accept it. It's a tall order, but we can make short people look big in today's world."

NAKED 'BURGLAR' CLAIMS SHE WAS RAPED!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Miami cops first rescued — then busted — a naked woman who was locked in a bathroom — because the two men she accused of raping and beating her claimed she was a burglar!

Ignoring the fact that not even in Florida do many women...if any...commit burglaries in the buff, the diligent lawmen read the unnamed Miss her rights, then hauled her off to the slammer.

"I told them I had been raped and had the hell beat out of me," the unidentified lass said.

"And what do the cops do? They haul ME off to jail."

The 28-year-old woman spent six days in jail before wiser minds finally reached the conclusion that maybe she was telling the truth about her ordeal, especially after doctors confirmed that she had indeed been sexually assaulted.

"She had been abducted and brutally raped," Dade County Assistant Public Defender Steven Leifman said.

"She had managed to lock herself in the bathroom. She was totally nude.

"She pretended to be talking to someone through the bathroom window and the two men, thinking the police would come, concocted the burglary story to counter her rape story.

"She was totally nude and bleeding from everywhere. She was so bad she had to be transported by ambulance to a hospital. Finally, the charges against her were dropped. The men are in custody on charges of kidnapping, rape and battery, but they haven't yet been formally charged."

The woman said she had just left a supermarket when she was forced into a car at gunpoint and taken to the apartment where she said she was raped and beaten.

Fight cancer with soup & ice cream

Doctors may one day fight the battle against deadly cancer with soup, ice cream and food cocktails if amazing new medical research is successful.

Licorice root, garlic, flax seed and citrus fruits all contain phytochemicals — compounds that researchers believe can prevent or inhibit cancer growth, according to consultant Alegria Caragay. "We may see the emergence of phytochemical soups, cocktails or even ice cream," Miss Caragay said at a Dairy and Food Industries Supply Association conference in Chicago.

A five-year research program at the National Cancer Institute is examining ways common foods can be used to fight cancer.

Slam the lid on a chatterbox without hurting his feelings!

A chatterbox will yak for hours — but you can get rid of nonstop talkers without hurting their feelings, experts say. Here are their tips on how to end a conversation diplomatically:

1. Feign illness. Say you have a headache or you feel like you're going to throw up. Start coughing. People tend to withdraw from others who are acting ill.

2. Excuse yourself for an appointment. Look at your watch and say you have to go pick someone up or have a doctor's appointment.

3. Mention a mini-emergency. Tell the chatterbox that you left your clothes in the dryer or that you have to put more money in the parking meter.

4. Start talking about something the chatterbox thinks is boring. If he dislikes baseball, bring up the latest scores and discuss batting averages.

5. Flatter him with a polite brush-off.

Try saying, "I'm sorry that you have to rush off, but I know that you have some important things to do and I don't want to keep you."

If a chatterbox traps you on the phone, try these simple tips.

1. Rap on a nearby table or desk. Tell the chatterbox you have to answer the door and you'll call back later.

2. Turn the dial or punch a button on the telephone.

Say there's some interference on the phone line and you'd better hang up for now.

3. Ask someone to interrupt your conversation with a message that someone is at the door or you're wanted in a meeting.

Fat cat Arab gives sexy belly dancer $3.6 million tip!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

A filthy rich Iraqi oil baron got so turned on by the heated gyrations of a nightclub's exotic belly dancer that he laid his personal bank check at her feet — in the staggering amount of $3.6 million!

Witnesses, quoted in a Baghdad newspaper, said the oilman's check soundly "humiliated" other playboys who threw thousands of 50-dinar notes to tempt the interest of Shalamara, a ravishing and blossoming young dancer who was making her debut in Baghdad.

A LOVE-STRUCK Iraqi oil baron gave a belly dancer $3.6 million.

At the time, the official international exchange rated one dinar worth slightly more than three U.S. dollars.

"When Shalamara finished her dance, she scooped up the money and the check and left the floor," a witnesses said. "A few moments later, she ran back out all excited and looking as though she had seen a ghost.

"In a voice quivering with emotion she asked for the person who had written the check to please identify himself so she could express her thanks. When the man stood up, Shalamara threw herself into his arms.

"Shalamara sat at the man's table and never budged from his side. She appeared to be enraptured with her new patron. When he left the nightclub several hours later, he did so with her clutching his arm. They drove off in a chauffeured Rolls-Royce," the witness said.

A club employee who was standing offstage to hand Shalamara a robe said he got a good look at the check as he draped the robe over the dancer's shoulders.

"At first I disbelieved my eyes," porter Sale Sa'eed said. "The check was made out in her name for 1 million dinars.

"Then I heard Shalamara ran back to the audience. The man never identified himself to anyone in the club and I have no idea who he is.

"But only someone rich with oil could dare be so free with so much money. Oil allows them to buy anything they want . . . even young love."

20 cars run over cyclist!

A cyclist was killed by a hit-and-run driver on a busy highway and 20 cars drove over the body before anyone stopped.

Cops in Karlsruhe, Germany, said the 20-year-old victim was struck by a car zooming by at 100 m.p.h. During the next half hour 20 more cars ran over the body and continued on their way.

'MOMMY'S DEAD & DADDY KILLED HER'

GRANDMA Theresa Teimann helps Keri with a jigsaw puzzle.

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff writer

Theresa Teimann listened in astonishment as her tiny granddaughter spoke those chilling words describing her mother's murder.

The horrified grandmother then realized her suspicions were true: Her daughter Cindy had been killed by her son-in-law Wayne — and little Keri, then 3, had witnessed the brutal slaying!

"Poor little Keri. We know that she saw it all," said Mrs. Tiemann, 58, of Denver, Colo. "She still has flashbacks, even though it happened four years ago. It breaks my heart. It tears me inside out."

Mrs. Tiemann's pretty daughter Cindy had met Wayne Gregory playing softball four years before her murder and fallen deeply in love with him. The couple lived together for a while, then married. They had two adorable children — Keri and Justin — but their marriage had grown increasingly unhappy.

A 3-year-old girl is the only witness to a brutal murder

Mrs. Tiemann soon realized that her daughter was living in fear. Her husband was insanely jealous. He watched Cindy's every move, struck her and once even kicked little Keri in the face.

"I said, 'Cindy, what's the matter with you? Take the children and get away!' But Cindy said, 'I can't leave. He'll hurt us. I can't.'

"I think of the things we tried to help Cindy leave that man, but they just didn't work."

Cindy flatly refused to leave her husband — and just as her loved ones feared, her decision spelled her doom.

Just before Christmas in 1986, 28-year-old Cindy was found dead in her apartment. Her husband told police it was an intruder who had stabbed the young mom 27 times.

He claimed he had chased the man through the backyard, but that the culprit had escaped over the fence. But police were suspicious, and it was Keri's shocking words a year later that eventually brought Wayne Gregory to justice.

The little girl was examined by a psychiatrist who confirmed that the child was acting out a murder she had witnessed many months before.

At the same time, a boot found in a dumpster near Cindy's apartment was traced to Wayne and matched to bloody footprints found at the murder scene.

Wayne was arrested and charged with his wife's murder. He was tried, found guilty and sentenced to life in prison.

"He has to serve at least 40 years before he gets parole," said Mrs. Tiemann, who formally adopted her daughter's children last

ON THEIR WEDDING DAY: Cindy and Wayne Gregory. "Nobody's smiling in the picture," says her mom.

Mother's Day card with a note one time, telling me how much he loved Cindy.

"All through Wayne's trial I felt total hatred for him. I kept wondering why he was still alive when my beautiful daughter was dead. Now I think I know.

"If Cindy had to die so his innocent children could lead a life without fear, then I suppose her death has meaning."

OLDEST SISTERS IN AMERICA ARE 100 AND 102

And they still work out every morning!

BESSIE, 100, left, was a dentist and her sister Sadie, 102, was the first black home economics teacher in New York City.

THE SISTERS believe in staying in shape and yoga exercises are a daily ritual.

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

It was a life of gas lamps, long skirts, horses and carriages when Sarah Delany was born back in 1889.

And through the decades spanning that long-ago yesterday and today, the two sisters — Sarah at 102 and Annie at 100 — have played their own small but significant part in American history.

Back when career opportunities were scarce for black men and women, Annie, known to friends and family as Bessie, became the second black licensed female dentist in New York City while Sarah, known as Sadie, became the first black to teach home economics in a New York high school.

Their father, Henry Beard Delany, a native of St. Mary's, Ga., was born into slavery but went on to become the first black Episcopal Church bishop in America.

"We didn't have much money," Bessie remembered while sitting with sister Sarah in the home they share in Mount Vernon, N.Y. "We just wanted to be the best at what we did."

To raise money to attend Columbia University's School of Dental and Oral Surgery, she taught for eight years in rural North Carolina schools. To pay for college in New York, Sadie worked as an adult education teacher in farm areas, showing blacks how to manage their households.

Incredibly, the sisters are still spry and never hesitant to be out and about. Their agility no doubt can be attributed to the yoga workouts they go through each morning. And both still nurture a warm sense of humor.

"I went to have my eyes checked two years ago," recalled Sadie with a twinkle of glee in her eyes. "I told the nurse my birthdate — 9/19/89. She said, 'That can't be. This is 1989.' I said no...1889."

Having been on this good earth as long as she has gives Bessie a special understanding of the role our presidents have played in U.S. history.

"Lyndon Johnson was my favorite," she said. "He did a lot for our people. He really wanted a Great Society." On Franklin Roosevelt, she said, "His wife was a much better person than he was. Next to my mother, I admire Eleanor Roosevelt more than any woman."

And on President Bush, she feels maybe she's too old to have an opinion.

"I pray for him," she admitted.

Talk your way into the job of your dreams!

Going for an important, future-changing job interview? The correct interview techniques could give you an edge. Here are a few tips that could make you a career winner:

√ Try to be one of the last people to be interviewed. Those interviewed before you will have made enough mistakes to make you look a lot better . . . if you're even remotely suited for the job.

√ Make sure you put your best foot forward! This is especially important in the first three or four minutes of the interview. Try not to bring up any negative point.

√ Let the person doing the interview do the most talking. Like anyone else, they're impressed with people who listen to them. Asking leading questions about the job will help keep the conversation ball in the other court.

√ Develop "me too" bonds with the interviewer. Listen carefully to what he or she says, then look for similarities and common interests between the two of you. The greater the similarity effect, the higher your evaluation will be.

√ Create a forward-looking image. Emphasize your goals and ambitions . . . what you're doing today, not past accomplishments. Career-related studies are good points to bring up.

√ Don't bad-mouth your past employer. You create a disloyal image.

√ Trying to make the interviewer feel sorry for you is a real bummer. Saying something like, "I really need the job," just makes you look like a loser — and no one wants to hire a loser!

Cops on lookout for 'bad-tempered creature with a mouth full of teeth!'

MONSTER LIZARD STALKING FLORIDA

HUGE 6-foot-long lizard is on the loose — and the hungry creature has virtually eliminated the stray cat population in Cape Coral, Florida.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Cautious cops are on the lookout for a bad-tempered monster with a mouth full of razor-sharp teeth that has been scaring the daylights out of frightened folks in Cape Coral, Fla.

Ralph Ferrara cornered the angry critter in his garage and when he prodded it with a shovel, the 6-foot-long lizard "came at him like a bull charging a matador."

"We all hauled butt," said firefighter Ronald Bromley, who had been called to help capture the monster. "That thing is big and really fast. And it has teeth and long claws."

Police believe the creature, known as a Nile monitor lizard, normally fears people and lives on a diet of fish and small land animals.

That might account for the disappearance of several stray cats around Cape Coral.

The hissing, spitting monster seems to like the quiet lifestyle around Cape Coral.

"It has been spotted sunbathing in backyards, swimming in canals and carports," said a police spokesman.

"It's a mean-looking son-of-a-gun."

Ferrara found the lizard crouched behind a washing machine in the garage after a neighbor said he saw a giant creature scurry under the half-open garage door.

"I saw its tail, and it ended in a stump as big as my hand," he said. "I got a shovel. I was ready for it."

But before attacking the lizard, Ferrara called 911. That's why Bromley and animal control officers were poked at it, it just came out running at us. It ran around the house and jumped in the canal," Bromley said.

Nile monitors are nothing new to south Florida. One 7-footer terrorized a Miami trailer park for weeks in 1985 until it was captured by game commission officers.

"When they're hungry, you better not get between them and food," said a police spokesman. "They are afraid of people, and would rather run than bite, but they can in-

WITNESS Ralph Ferrara cornered the giant lizard in his garage, but the creature lunged at him "like a bull after a matador" and escaped into a canal.

Sleeping woman SCALPED by her boyfriend!

Unsuspecting Sheila Cowherd was sound asleep when a man with a razor sneaked into the bedroom, quickly grabbed her by the hair — and viciously scalped her.

"He sliced her forehead open from ear to ear, peeled back the skin with his hands and ripped it off all the way to the back of her neck," said Baltimore, Md., police spokesman Dennis Hill.

The frantic woman's screams awakened others in the house, who called police and an ambulance.

Cops found the woman in critical condition from loss of blood. Her scalp was on the floor under the bed. She was able to tell police the name of her attacker before passing out.

The 43-year-old victim was spending the night at a friend's house when a man she had been dating dropped by to use the bathroom in another part of the house.

"He went directly to where she was sleeping with a razor in his hand," Hill said. "He jerked her awake by the hair and proceeded with the grisly attack. He fled before others in the house reached the second-floor bedroom."

While police searched for the merciless assailant, surgeons fought to save the victim's life.

"During a six hour operation, surgeons grafted skin from the victim's side and covered her scalp. She was hospitalized for two weeks after the horrifying attack.

"I've seen some pretty bizarre things in 18 years of police work, but I have never seen anything quite like that," said Police Det. David Brown.

Cops later arrested Edward Little, 63, and charged him with maiming. Little admitted the horrifying crime, but didn't say why he did it, Hill said.

That's right, the 36-year-old Philadelphia woman shares the lives of both men, and loves them both equally. She says that if she hadn't married Don, she would have married John, but either way it's the same thing.

JUST ONE HAPPY FAMILY! Karen is a contented housewife caring for two men — and she loves every minute of it!

Karen met the men of her dreams 10 years ago at a Red Cross dance.

At first she thought she had met only one handsome guy — but found out later in the evening that she'd been taking turns dancing with identical twins.

Since that night, the three have been inseparable.

In August 1983, Don asked Karen to marry him. The trio say they planned from the start that John would be part of the marriage.

KAREN gets a smooch from both her guys, Don, left, and John.

"I'm never jealous of John and he's never jealous of me," explained Don, 37, who dresses to match his brother every day.

"We are used to sharing this way. We feel we should share Karen. And Karen always treats us exactly the same.

"She never does for one what she wouldn't do for the other."

Karen and her two men share a Philadelphia urban apartment, dividing the household chores equally.

In the mornings, all three go off to work — John and Don as insurance representatives and Karen as a day care worker.

They all get home first and they have a cold beer while waiting for their woman to arrive home from work.

"They treat me like a queen," says happy Karen. "I feel like I have twice the attention, twice the affection and twice the good fortune that other women have. What woman wouldn't love to take my place?"

John and Don say they think they're the lucky ones.

"We know our relationship is bizarre, but it's very happy," Don says.

"John and I regard ourselves as one person, so it seems natural we should love the same woman.

"We don't care what other people think as long as we can be together and enjoy one another."

TOMBSTONE FOR A GHOST!

By BRUCE STEVENS
Special correspondent

A bizarre monument erected by a small town to the memory of a ghost has kept alive the sad, macabre crime legend of the young bride who reappeared from beyond the grave to testify against her killer.

The tale involves Zona Heaster Shue, who was just 21 when she was murdered. She is better known now as the Greenbrier Ghost.

The tombstone erected by the residents of Greenbrier County, W. Va., ensures that her incredible story will never ever be forgotten.

Historians have documented the strange case that began Jan. 22, 1897, when Anderson Jones, a local boy, was running errands for Zona's husband, blacksmith Edward Shue. "I thought something was wrong," the youth said. "The doors were closed and there was an air about the place I didn't like."

When no one answered, the boy pushed open the unlocked door and found the pretty young woman's body.

Hearing of his wife's death, the blacksmith ran home and cradled her body in his arms.

Shue steadfastly refused to leave his dead wife's side until she was buried.

Although Zona's death was attributed to heart failure, her mother, Mary Heaster, prayed for more information about her daughter's untimely demise.

The details were supplied by the dead woman when she appeared and spoke to her mother. At Mrs. Heaster's urging, authorities exhumed Zona's body and discovered she had died from a broken neck.

Shue was charged with the murder. Mary Heaster, who quoted the ghost of her daughter, prompted the arrest.

The blacksmith had come home from work and flew into a rage because Zona had prepared no meat for dinner, according to the testimony. Shue grabbed his wife's head and twisted her neck and killed her.

Shue was found guilty and died in prison eight years later. In 1979 the tombstone honoring Zona was erected.

THE SPERMINATOR!

Doc made 7 women pregnant, say cops

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A fertility doctor has been nicknamed "The Sperminator" by investigators who say he fathered several children with unsuspecting women — by using his own sperm.

"I knew my semen was safe because I haven't slept with anyone but my wife in our 35 years of marriage," said Dr. Cecil Jacobson, 55, indicted on 53 counts of fraud and perjury by a federal grand jury.

The doctor said he planted his seed in the women because fresh semen works better than frozen semen.

And at the time in the mid-80's, with AIDS running rampant, he couldn't be sure of the donors.

But investigators say there were no sperm bank depositors to be suspicious of.

Dr. Jacobson only told women that the semen came from a special pool of anonymous donors, officials say.

The charges claim that at least seven women gave birth to his kids because the blood types of the babies matched his, proving the doctor was the daddy.

The doctor said there was nothing greater than the feeling of knowing that these children would be normal, saying he didn't do it for the money.

Dr. Jacobson, a father of seven children with his wife, felt he was giving his patients the gift of healthy, happy babies.

The doctor has also been accused of tricking a number of other women by prescribing hormones and medications which simulated pregnancy even though they weren't pregnant.

He later told these expectant mothers they had miscarried and that the dead fetuses had been "reabsorbed" back into the body, officials say.

Dr. Jacobson admitted to making a mistake on the ultrasound tests but said he "thought" he saw the embryos.

If convicted on all 53 counts, the doctor could be fined $500,000 and up to 285 years in prison.

FED-UP WIFE KILLS CHEATIN' HUBBY'S $250,000 GOLDFISH!

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Correspondent

When skirt-chasing hubby Mark Sherman had a fling with another woman, his wife got even by killing off his prized $250,000 collection of rare goldfish!

When Mark came home one evening, he found the decapitated goldfish floating in their tank with their heads bobbing on the water's surface.

But his wife didn't stop there. After slaughtering the fish, she hurried to the bank, drew out their $85,000 savings, closed their joint checking account, obtained a legal separation and arranged to have him booted out of their $165,000 home in Seattle, Wash., the very next day!

"I loved him and I really, really believed he loved me," 28-year-old Jana Sherman said.

"When I learned that he was sleeping with another woman, my world ended. I was devastated.

"But the hurt didn't last long. When I thought about what he had done to me, I got mad. Then I decided to get even!

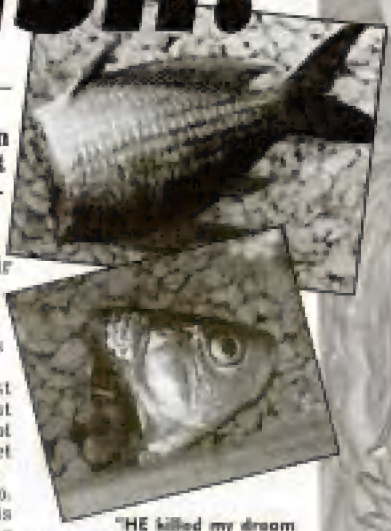
"And I knew just what to do. Those stupid fish were his pride and joy. He kept telling me, 'In a few years I'll make millions off these fish.' Then we were going to sit back and live the good life. Sure. Me and him and his bimbo bed mate.

"Well, he killed my dream, and now I've killed his. It's like they say, what goes around comes around."

Mark, at 30 the sole owner of a prosperous and growing electronics development firm, was totally floored by Jana's coldblooded vindictiveness and the calculating way she managed to carry out her plan for revenge.

"I just can't believe she did it," he said.

"I lost some of the finest



"HE killed my dream and now I've killed his," says Mark Sherman's wife Jana.

When fully grown, I could have sold them for as much as $250,000 each. They were my future... my retirement. I never dreamed that a woman could be so hateful."

But as far as Jana is concerned, Mark's fish are only the tip of the iceberg.

"The lesson isn't over yet," she said. "I can take him to the cleaners if I want to. But when he comes crawling back to me with hat in hand... when he's ready to quit chasing every skirt he sees, maybe then I'll forgive.

"But I won't forget. No way

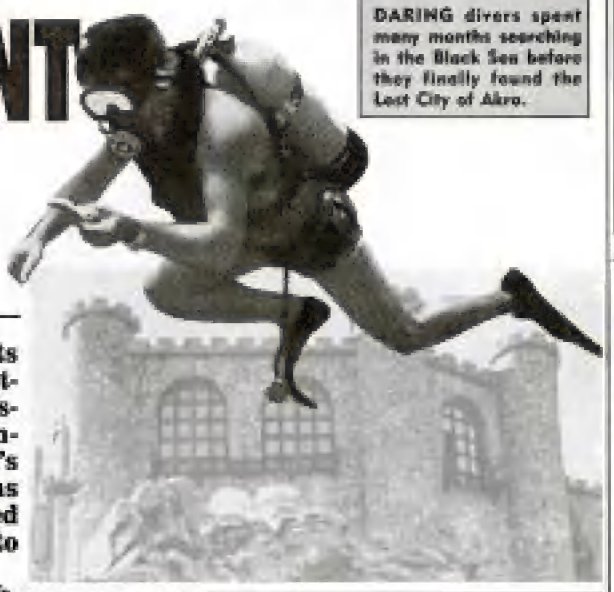
Divers make startling discovery

JAPANESE FIND LOST ANCIENT CITY!



DARING divers spent many months searching in the Black Sea before they finally found the Lost City of Akra.

By ELLIS MAY
Special correspondent

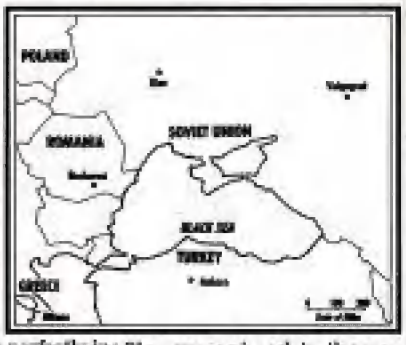
Japanese scientists have made the greatest archaeological discovery since the unearthing of King Tut's tomb — the remains of a highly developed civilization believed to exist in mythology!

Divers have found the fabled Lost City of Akra which, according to legend, sank into the Black Sea when an earthquake devastated the region centuries before the birth of Christ.

Although the city and its super-culture are mentioned in ancient manuscripts, most archaeologists believed it never really existed because, until now, no trace of it had ever been found.

"This is a finding of a magnitude beyond all comparison," declared Professor Kazuo Ueda, who received permission from the Soviet Union to explore off its coast.

"To uncover Akra — a place that I believed lived only in the minds of storytellers — was like watching the city of Atlantis rise from the sea. The earthquake turned a lot of the city to rubble, but there are many structures that appear to have sunk safely. They are in a remarkable state of preservation.



"One exciting find is the stone wall that surrounded the city. A vast section remains more or less perfectly in place.

"But that may be overshadowed when we completely expose a square stone tower and the carved dome of what must have been an early temple."

Anthropologist Dr. Nobuo Oku was assigned to the project in early December when human skeletal remains were found scattered in the sea bed.

"We have so far recovered the almost complete skeleton of a victim of the earthquake," the scientist said. "Even the brain matter contains enough genetic material to allow us to experiment with duplicating the victim through cloning."

Though some scientists have expressed skepticism about the discovery Ueda says there is no doubt in his mind.

"Soon we will present irrefutable evidence," he said. "Once the doubters see what we have from the sea, they will concede we have made the Americans go for big busts...Frenchmen like legs...

What kind of gal turns guys on?

It all depends on where she's from!

By CYNTHIA DURAND/ Special to the News

American men want feminine women with big busts... Frenchmen adore good legs and a seductive manner... Germans like their ladies big, healthy-looking and aggressive.

A two-year, eight-nation study of what men find attractive in women — conducted for the French cosmetics giant L'Oreal — discovered that the female ideal varies widely around the globe.

Here are the findings of consultant Clothaire Rapaille, who did the study for L'Oreal:

√U.S.A. — "American men like women with an ample bust and long, glamorous hair," said Rapaille. "They don't like women who come on too masculine.

"Unlike many countries, makeup and slinky clothes aren't particularly important. Jeans and sneakers are fine, as long as a women has a large bust, a gentle personality and — if she's more intelligent than a man — the sense not to admit it."

√Italy — "Sophia Loren is the best example of the type of woman most attractive to Italian men," said Rapaille. "She is almost a goddess with big breasts and big hips.

"Italian women have to dress as if they were going to star in a movie — wearing as much makeup as possible, perfumes, chains, bracelets and sexy dresses, anything that exaggerates the feminine form."

√Germany — "Men in Germany like women to be masculine, the kind who can almost make them crawl," revealed Rapaille. "German women must be aggressive, have long hair, be healthy and well shaped."

√England — Probably the worst country for women because men frankly find them boring and prefer to spend time with their male cronies.

"Englishwomen spend the most of any country on cosmetics, but none of it seems to work with the typical Englishman," revealed Rapaille.

"Englishwomen must be ladylike, not sexy, and keep a low profile. Englishmen think this is really classy."

√Japan — Japanese men don't care about a woman's figure. "The face and the neck are very sexy for Japanese men," said Rapaille. "That is why a woman must put her hair up, to show her neck. If she wears it down, she is considered dirty — and cleanliness is very important."

√Spain — "The Spanish woman must wear her hair long and wear clothes that show her bust and the shape of her body," said Rapaille. "She must also consider herself superior to men and the eyes are very important — a Spanish woman must learn to seduce with her eyes."

√Norway — The ideal Norwegian woman is blonde, tall and never wears makeup. She likes sports and going out drinking with her man.

√France — Frenchmen like their women super-seductive — and very capable.

"They must be a mother, a professional woman and very elegant," said Rapaille. "A Frenchwoman must be a top manager during the day, and sexy at night. And her legs are very important — they must be good.

"Women all over the world look to the Frenchwoman as the perfect example of femininity," he said. "If a woman wants to be super-seductive, she should become more French."

Bible quote gets killer off the hook

Karl Chambers got the death penalty in the murder of a 70-year-old woman but the sentence didn't stick — because the prosecuter quoted the Bible in his statement to the jury!

"This is outrageous," fumed Stanley Rebert, district attorney of York Co., Pa. "I don't know of any God-fearing prosecutor who hasn't used some scriptural or religious reference in arguing to a jury."

In overturning the sentence Court ruled that prosecutors cannot quote the Bible or any other religious work in support of the death penalty.

During the sentencing phase of Chambers' trial, Rebert had told jurors: "Karl Chambers has taken a life. As the Bible says, 'And the murderer shall be put to death.' "

The high court upheld Chambers' murder conviction but sent the case back to York County Common Pleas Court

MAN MISSING SINCE 1974 FOUND DEAD . . . right where psychic said he was

By DICK DONOVAN / Staff writer

In 1974, a psychic predicted that a missing Kansas City businessman would be found "in a cold, dark place." Seventeen years later, his skeletal remains were discovered — deep inside the dank, inky blackness of an underground cave!

The skeleton of Gary R. Simmons, clad in cowboy boots, rotted clothing, and with a bullet hole in the skull, was found by a bus driver who explores caves as a hobby.

Simmons was identified by a driver's license found in his clothing, and by dental records that matched the teeth in the skull. Cops say there is little doubt that he was murdered and they are reasonably certain his killer was Tommy R. Dixon, who hasn't been seen since the day after Simmons' disappearance.

What cops apparently don't know is why Dixon committed the coldblooded murder. They also aren't convinced that Dixon planned and carried out the crime on his own. What they are pretty sure of, though, is that Dixon is dead!

Tommy Dixon

"It just isn't possible for him not to have surfaced," Kansas City homicide Detective Victor Zin explained. "There are so many ways he would have been found. A traffic ticket or any kind of employment background check could have done it. Seventeen years is a long time for someone to stay underground."

On the day he vanished, Simmons, then 32, the father of two and the owner of a small chain of gas stations, left his Overland Park, Kan., office with Dixon. Though both were members of the same horse association, it's believed they had met for the first time that morning, apparently to transact the sale of a horse.

In fact, later that morning, Simmons telephoned his secretary and instructed her to draw up a $30,000 check to pay Dixon for a horse. Then he called his bank to alert them that Dixon would be in to cash the check. And that's exactly what the suspected killer did later that day!

Dixon was spotted the following day at a truck stop in Olathe, a community about nine miles south of Simmons' Overland Park office. Where he went from there . . . or what happened to him . . . remains a mystery to this day. Simmons' silver Lincoln Continental was pulled from the Missouri River in April 1975.

If cops had expected to find the missing man's body inside, they were disappointed.

Then, at long last, the missing businessman's skeletal remains were found . . . "in a cold, dark place," just as a psychic had foretold 17 years before.

CURIOUS bystanders peer into the cave — described by a psychic as the "cold, dark place" where Gary Simmons' skeleton was found.

Farmer boots mini-Bigfoot out of his beet patch

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Innkeeper Lester Lisle thought his life was about to come to a screeching halt when he came face to face with New Zealand's pint-sized relative of North America's elusive Bigfoot monster — but he's still alive to tell the tale!

In fact, though Les was quaking in his boots, it was the half-man, half-ape beast — not Les — who ran off like a mutt with its tail between its legs.

"I thought, 'Les, old man, prepare to meet your Maker!'" bloodcurdling encounter with Moehau, the hairy creature that prowls the rugged west coast of New Zealand's South Island.

"But to my utter amazement, the moment it spotted me, it ran off howling like a banshee.

"In fact, it was so damn terrified, it pooped as it crashed through the bush."

Les was roused from his sleep early one morning by a loud noise coming from a vegetable garden he has behind his inn. When he stepped outside, there was the Moehau, eating his beets.

"I froze in my tracks," Les recalled. "I stood there paralyzed, how long before the creature looked up and saw me. I expected it to attack me and rip my arms and legs off. It was small, about four feet tall, but I could see the muscles rippling, even under the hair that covered its body.

"It stood there for a few seconds, just staring back at me. Then it just spun around and ran off howling.

"Later that day, I went out in the garden to see what was left of my beets. That's when I saw the trail of dung it left when it ran into the bush.

"It was interesting, but nothing I want to keep as a souvenir."

Driver parks his bus — and drops dead!

A Greyhound bus driver who'd logged more than 2 million miles on the road without an accident managed to make his last run safely — even attack behind the wheel. Jim Sneed, 59, pulled his bus off a busy highway near Claremore, Okla., when pain gripped his chest. Moments later, he col-

SEEING-EYE GUY!

By BEATRICE DEXTER/ Special correspondent

Blind biologist Theresa Clemson wanted a guide dog but the waiting list was far too long, so she put an ad in her local paper — and hired a seeing-eye man!

Now the 36-year-old spinster gets around with ease, led wherever she wants to go by her faithful guide Lester Conklin.

"It's an unusual arrangement, I know, but it's a good one," says Theresa, a college instructor who lives in Los Angeles not far from Conklin. "Lester needed a job and I needed help. Luckily, I get government assistance so I can afford to pay him.

"I don't want anyone thinking we're personally involved in any way so I asked him to wear a harness and walk in front of me just like a dog would. That way neither of us has to worry about keeping up a conversation and people don't get the wrong idea."

Lester's duties include reporting to Theresa in the morning, waking her, fixing her meals and picking up her apartment.

But otherwise he's just like any guide dog for the blind, leading his companion through hallways and streets, stopping at red lights and crossing streets on green ones, helping her weave around pedestrians and obstacles and protecting her from danger.

Conklin, 34, says he likes the job because it's not too demanding. He puts in a long day, but has free time, while Theresa is teaching or researching, to take classes at local colleges.

"For me, having Lester has meant having real freedom for the first time," says Theresa, who lost her eyesight in a tragic car wreck that wiped out her entire family. "Not only can I go wherever I want now, but I can do it with a human helpmate, someone I can communicate with much better than a dog."

A GUIDE MAN proves more useful than a dog on a shopping trip, says Theresa. "A man can open doors for me."
